

Don't breathe in! Protestors against treatment of caged birds put themselves inside cages at Carrington Place in Katoomba last Saturday to emphasise their point.

Caged for a cause

The Human Battery Cage is a unique piece of performance art designed to show the public, in a vivid and realistic way, the cramped conditions caged birds are subjected to for the production of eggs for human consumption.

More than 15 people, led by co-ordinator Drew Fryer and members of the Animal Liberation Blue Mountains Group, placed themselves in cages in Katoomba last Saturday.

The group attracted some curious glances by intrigued locals and tourists passing by and some signed a petition against cruelty to birds.

For more information about the caged birds campaign that is touring the country, go to www.humanbattery.com.